Hey – No worries. I think the AP, WSJ and NYT have written pretty comprehensively on the larger issue, so not sure there's a ton more to say right now.

Sorry we didn't connect on Friday. Got caught up in edits for a Sunday story. Do you think there's a still something to be said about the larger issue? That hasn't been beaten into the ground already?

Hope all's well with you..

Hiya—we're updating the current story to say that water levels are back to pre-spill conditions. I'm crashing on something else (non-EPA today) but hope to get around to a story about toxin mine waste (the bigger problem) tomorrow.. If there's something we should know would love to hear from you..

I'll see if Tom can give you a call. He was with her.

Regarding mining stories, there are some really good ones out there. Here are a few:

That would be great, tnx.. The event is 4p.m. EDT so hopefully not too long after that, right? meanwhile, for color, did she already do the tour? Can you tell me what she did and saw? If there's even a snippet of a quote from her morning I'd love to have it.. tnx much. I appreciate the ironies here and we're looking at doing a story on the mining issues that created the waste pond to begin with..

Hi – hope you're weathering the, um, flood.. I'm assuming there's no remote access to the media avail out there today. Will there be a way to get comments/statements from the visit?

Thanks & good luck!
